Focused Programming: The PSB-CY Courses

Understanding the factors associated with normal and concerning sexual behavior is important when preparing professionals and caregivers with the best practices to keep children safe and thriving during childhood and youth. The SBCY series addresses normal sexual behavior in children in addition to exploring cautionary and problematic sexual behavior. The four-part Problematic Sexual Behavior of Children and Youth: Clinical Assessment and Treatment Overview courses provide professional development for clinically assessing, responding to, and treating PSB-CY.

Clinical Assessment of Children and Youth with PSB

Course 1 overviews the clinical assessment process when a child or youth has engaged in problematic sexual behavior. Identify research-informed topics relevant to clinical assessments and strategies to keep youth engaged during interviews.

Caregiver Engagement in Assessment and Treatment

Course 2 covers the caregiver's role in the clinical assessment and treatment of PSB-CY. Discover the vital role caregivers play throughout intake assessment, treatment, and safety planning for their children.

Clinical Decision-Making and Treatment Planning

Course 3 provides an overview of clinical decision-making and treatment planning for youth exhibiting PSB. Gain strategies that caregivers should use to assess when and how to gradually decrease safety and supervision over time.

Monitoring Safety Planning, Supervision, & Treatment Progress

Course 4 identifies the key components of an effective safety and supervision plan for families and youth who present with PSB. Gain strategies for determining what level of care is best to meet the youth with PSB needs and the safety of others.

Get on the Balcony and Find Your Leverage

It's easy to talk about 'the system' like it's something happening to us. But what if you're already standing inside it – and holding one of the levers?

We often talk about "the system" as something distant – a force acting on us rather than something we're part of. In this episode, Erin and Jessica offer a practice for stepping onto the balcony to see your place inside a system you're frustrated with or curious about, whether that's at work, in your community, or even in your own evening routine.
