Physical Activity Across the Lifespan for Individuals with Disabilities

This session will present the importance and benefits of physical activity for individuals with disabilities. Focus will include how we define developmentally appropriate physical activity for different age groups as well as the legal rights to access and programming. Participants will learn how to determine the most appropriate activities for an individual based on their interests and motivation.

The objectives of this interactive webinar are to:

- Understand the benefits of physical activity for individuals with disabilities.
- Know the recommended activities levels for individuals of all abilities.
- Learn how to match an activity to an individual's skills and interest
- Discover ways to reach out within your community
