Anchored. Episode 19 |
Supporting Military Spouses with Employment and Higher Education Transitions

Military spouses face countless transitions and life-changes that can impact their career and higher education goals. This podcast episode explores Christine "C.C." Gallagher's experience as a military spouse and mother who has gone through several Permanent Change of Stations (PCSs) and how they've impacted her employment journey. C.C. shares helpful resources connected to military spouse employment and higher education. Molly Herndon offers details about two MFLN Personal Finance webinars focusing on military spouse employment as well as the Forever GI Bill and higher education.

March was National Traumatic Brain Injury (TBI) Awareness Month

The brain is the powerhouse for all we do, say, think, and feel. When the brain sustains an injury, every aspect of one's life may be impacted. And the possibility of sustaining a TBI is increased for military service members in comparison to their civilian contemporaries. The Defense and Veterans Brain Injury Center found that over 413,858 service members have been diagnosed with some form of TBI from 2000-2019.

March is National Brain Injury Awareness Month and we wanted to observe this topic which is so prevalent in the military service population, by providing resources for those impacted by TBI.

Click here to read our blog post on resources for patients, caregivers, and health professionals dealing with the various forms of traumatic brain injury.
