FAMILY DEVELOPMENT NEWSLETTERMODELING HEALTHY TECHNOLOGY BEHAVIORS FOR YOUNG CHILDREN*THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 24*11 AM - 12:30 PM ET

Technology has become integrated into virtually every facet of our lives, with benefits like convenience, the ability to communicate over long distances and help to organize busy family schedules. Unfortunately, technology can also be a major disruption to nurturing parent-child relationships, when adults become consumed in their electronic devices at the expense of quality time with their children. Increased internet and technology access for children and adolescents also brings concerns for how easily young people can be exposed to sexual content that is developmentally inappropriate, or even harmful or illegal, such as child sexual abuse material.

In this webinar, Dr. Erin Taylor, Licensed Clinical Psychologist and Assistant Professor at the University of Oklahoma Health Sciences Center, will:

- Provide an overview of the importance for parents and caregivers to model healthy boundaries with technology for healthy child social-emotional development
- Explain how to best support parents and other adults in setting appropriate examples in their use of technology, including teaching children and youth lessons on consent that are translatable to both in-person and online interactions
- And explore how positive examples of technology use by adults can help reduce risk for children and youth to engage in, or be impacted by, problematic sexual behavior.

This webinar is part of the Sexual Behavior in Children & Youth (SBCY) Series. Visit the series homepage for more information and a list of other trainings within this series!
