

THE COOPERATIVE EXTENSION SYSTEM

A Force Multiplier for Military Readiness

COURSE INFORMATION

The Cooperative Extension System is well-positioned to serve military families dispersed throughout the United States. Through the land-grant university system, military family service providers can be supported by the research-driven Cooperative Extension System to boost the work they do to support family well-being.

This course explores the history, accessibility, and programs of the Cooperative Extension System.

In this course, participants will:

1. Gain awareness of Extension's long-standing commitment to families, including military-connected families.
2. Learn about the organization of Extension Services at the federal, state, and local levels.
3. Learn about Extension programming that focuses on services and resources for active-duty military families and others in the military community.
4. Understand how to leverage Cooperative Extension as part of the Family Readiness System to support military family well-being and readiness.

CONTINUING EDUCATION

- Accredited Financial Counselors (AFC): This course has been approved by the Association for Financial Counseling & Planning Education (AFCPE)
- Certified Personal Finance Counselors (CPFC): This course has been approved by the Center for Financial Certifications (FinCert).
- Certified Family Life Educators (CFLE): This course has been approved by the National Council on Family Relations (NCFR) for 1.5 CE credit for CFLE.
- Certificates of Attendance are available for providers interested in documenting their training activities.

Join course here!

COURSE AUTHOR

Keith Tidball Ph.D.

*Assistant Director, Cornell Cooperative Extension
Senior Extension Associate, Natural Resources and the Environment*

 OneOp
Readiness. Knowledge. Network.