Virtual Conference Session #1

The Family Readiness System and You

Situate yourself, your work, and your organization within the FRS!

Are you a service provider or educator who works with military families? If so, you are a crucial member of the Department of Defense Family Readiness System (FRS): a network of agencies, programs, organizations, and individuals—and the collaboration among them—supporting military family readiness and quality of life. This part informational, part Q&A session will provide an overview of the FRS and its implications, as well as an in-depth panel discussion. The moderated panel discussion will be driven by YOUR questions about the FRS, your experiences, and your previous and future contributions as a military family service provider. This opening session will provide an opportunity for you to situate yourself, your work, and your organization within the FRS by asking direct questions, sharing ideas, and making connections with other participants.
